The Gillette office of ICF has specialized in providing impact assessments, monitoring, and terrestrial wildlife mitigation for energy-related industry clients since 1980. The staff of wildlife biologists consults on ecological services for a broad range of clients, including the surface coal mines, as well as in-situ uranium, bentonite, gold, wind, oil, and natural gas industries. Our thoughtful and innovative wildlife mitigation projects have earned multiple state and national awards, and ICF is widely regarded as the top wildlife consulting firm in the Powder River Basin. Our office is committed to environmental stewardship and sustainable business operations. In 2011, we adopted a waste management system that encouraged recycling by placing clearly marked collection bins in convenient locations throughout the office.
